NCRC and our members believe that financial institutions are the best hope for America’s neighborhoods. We recognize that without their genuine commitment to invest in low-wealth communities, we will see little economic progress.

For these and other reasons, NCRC and our members work with financial institutions, academia, the business community and other anchor institutions to better include low-wealth neighborhoods, especially communities of color, in their business models. We advise these institutions on the economic deficits within these communities and interventions needed to help them build wealth.

NCRC has a long tradition of challenging financial institutions to do more in underserved neighborhoods. To that end, we do not accept contributions from corporation’s contingent on any public policy position or activity. NCRC maintains total independence and ultimate authority over its policy-making activities separate and apart from our corporate partnerships.

NCRC appreciates the support we receive from our conference sponsors as it helps us build community around the common goal of advancing a more just economy. We are proud to partner with like-minded institutions, in conjunction with our member organizations, to support the equitable and effective delivery of financial services to communities across the country.

Building stronger communities

At JPMorgan Chase, we believe that everyone should share in the rewards of a growing economy. We seek to improve neighborhoods and advance promising solutions that connect families and business owners to economic opportunity. Reducing inequality and creating widely-shared prosperity requires collaboration of business, government, nonprofit and other civic organizations.

We are proud to participate in these efforts and support NCRC.
We give to our neighborhoods. Sponsor youth sports and education. And support other good causes. While our communities enjoy the philanthropic dividends, so do we. Because we are the community. We’re the little league coach approving your car loan. Or the financial advisor volunteering for a city park cleanup. We are neighbors and bankers. In that order. We support visions for our future.

We’re committed to the programs and organizations that work to enrich the quality of life for everyone in our community. By sharing the goal of molding leaders through education and community support, their vision and energy will create a better future for us all. usbank.com/communitypossible

We’re making the best possible investment: Our community.
Every day, as we are running through our busy lives, it becomes easy to forget to stop and appreciate our surroundings: our community. At Huntington, we see it as our responsibility to not just appreciate our communities, but to always be looking for ways to make them better. That’s why we are proud to support the National Community Reinvestment Coalition and organizations focused on improving our neighborhoods and the lives of those who live there. Together, we can make a difference.

OUR ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN THESE WORDS.

Citi has a long-standing commitment to closing the racial wealth gap, and now with Action for Racial Equity, we have launched more than $1 billion in strategic initiatives to accelerate those efforts across our lines of business. These efforts will provide greater access to banking and credit in communities of color, increase investment in Black-owned businesses, expand homeownership among Black Americans and advance anti-racist practices in the financial services industry. That way communities of color can build a stronger economic presence and progress towards a future that we can all believe in.
